35TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE
ROME
8-10 SEPTEMBER 2022
All roads lead to Rome
Welcome back to the SISP in-person conference

The 2022 conference of the Italian Political Science Association will be held in Rome, at the campus of Sapienza University. This is the first in-person event organized by the SISP since September 2019! We are thrilled about that. We can’t wait. Lots of things have changed during the past two years, and I have to thank my predecessor Francesca Longo, who has worked hard during all this time to avoid that the limitations imposed by the pandemic outbreak might lead to a phase of decline of our association.

We are here, finally. Strong as ever. Thanks to the efforts of so many people. Our colleagues from the Local Organizing Committee at Sapienza University of Rome, in particular, hung in there and now they fulfil the dream of hosting a big conference in such an important location, and in the gorgeous scenery of the eternal city!

We offer our participants an amazing program, with one of the highest number of panels (and papers) ever reached in the forty-year history of our association. Thanks to our Standing Group coordinators, and to all the panel chairs, we have assembled a composite list of opportunities to discuss about papers and presentations. After two years of forced absence, the state of the SISP community looks vivid and inspired. More than ever.

We know this is just a first step. The pandemic crisis is not over, and other challenges and constraints have emerged. We are aware of our responsibilities. Of the difficulties we are living in Europe. Of the financial constraints, especially for the young generations of scholars. And of course, of all the precautions we have to take in order to enjoy a safe conference.

But we are back now! And we are sure that meeting in Rome, all together and in-person, will be simply great.

red that their children would be better off, while a striking 71% believed that they would be worse off. It looks as though most of us have lost faith in a democratic future! Some blame accelerated, unaccountable and unbalanced turbo-capitalism for depriving us of the future. For others populism and the personal flaws of our leaders are seen as the reasons for the political disarray of today. However, this lecture suggests a more fundamental explanation.

The future is increasingly grim because democratic politics is not suited for handling time and space in a way that safeguards the interests of future generations and overcomes state borders. Democracy is currently tied to nation-states defending the selfish interests of a given territory and community.

Democracy is also hostage to present-day voters with detrimental implications for future generations. This explains why politics stumbles in the ever more interdependent global environment, running at an ever faster pace from one crisis to another.

is Professor of Politics and International Relations at the University of Venice, Ca’ Foscari. His work oscillates between the fields of international relations, comparative politics and political theory. Zielonka has produced eighteen books including Counter-revolution: Liberal Europe in Retreat (Oxford University Press, 2018, awarded the 2019 UACES prize for the best book on Europe and translated into Italian, German, Polish, Estonian and Korean), Politics and the Media in New Democracies. Europe in a Comparative Perspective (Oxford University Press, 2015), Is the EU doomed? (Polity Press, 2014), and Europe as Empire. The Nature of the Enlarged European Union (Oxford University Press, 2006). He is a Member of Academia Europaea. In 2017 he received in Wien the Lifetime Achievement Award ‘Golden Arrow’.

There is a growing body of evidence suggesting that citizens lost trust in their governments and parliaments across Europe and the United States. Asked in one study how they would feel about reducing the number of national parliamentarians in their country and giving those seats to AI with access to their data, half of respondents, particularly the young, proved enthusiastic. In France, only 9% of those polled declared that their children would be better off, while a striking 71% believed that they would be worse off.
